Michael Gould composed 240 tracks of music integrated into a custom computer app for 240 pictures from Oliver Raszewski that were already created in the 1990s shortly after the fall of the Berlin Wall. The premise of the original work from 1993 (in the form of a game and in four distinct categories of artwork) centered itself on viruses transmitting themselves through large and small architectural spaces. The exhibition opening was planned for October 2020 with 14 dancers from Berlin under the direction of the choreographer Nadja Raszewski but it could not take place because of the pandemic. This fact made the artistic content of the exhibition even more relevant and the idea arose to design the project as a digital performance under a newly founded organization – siida performing network (spn). spn unites dancers, musicians and artists of every genre and background from around the world to participate in creating new work.

In January 2021 siida performing network started sending invitations to dancers and artists from all over the world to join the Transit project.

In July 2021 the first micronauts image series from the larger work Transit was completed with 60 dance videos from all over the world.
